

NARROW ESCAPE

OF MR. McDONOUGH

Well-Known Saloonists Gets Stuck in the Mud While Hunting.

RESCUED BY HIS FRIENDS.

Was Bored to the Waist and Nearly Frozen When Assistance Reached Him—Duck Shooting Was Fine, However.

While hunting ducks Friday morning, Fat. McDonough, a well-known citizen of Richmond, got stuck in the quagmire, and but for the timely assistance of his friends, he would have been drowned or frozen to death. Having been rescued without injury from a bad cold and stiffness of joints, Mr. McDonough is being cajoled by his friends because of his mishap.

A party consisting of Mr. McDonough, Messrs. O. J. Mallory, Ots H. Mallory, Charlie Britton and Herbert Shaw, and Master James McDonough started out last Tuesday for a spell of duck-hunting. They hired the yacht belonging to Mr. William B. White, of this city, and started on the trip about 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. They stopped over at Carl's Neck Tuesday night, the next morning going on to Tar Day, arriving down the river, where they were hunting at this point the party started back, reaching Carl's Neck Thursday night.

On Friday morning at daylight three of the party—Messrs. McDonough, Ots H. Mallory and Shaw—went to explore the swamp and kill all the ducks possible. About 5:30 o'clock Mr. McDonough got lost from the others. It was snowing rapidly, and after hunting for him until 10 o'clock the other two returned to the boat. Shortly after Mr. McDonough was found, and Mr. Mallory set out again to hunt for Mr. McDonough, returning to the boat in about two hours, reporting no success.

The party, seeing that they could not track their friend, adopted other measures to gain a knowledge of his whereabouts. Guns were fired from the deck of the yacht, and after some time an indistinct answering call was heard. More guns were fired, and the boat was on in the direction of the answering call. When latter became more distinct Mr. Mallory landed, and guided by cries for "help," he soon came within sight of Mr. McDonough.

STUCK IN MUD.

He found him up to his waist in mud and immediately took measures to save him. The tide was in and the water about knee deep but he gained a footing on a small island in the marsh, broke down a young sapling, and swimming out to Mr. McDonough, placed it in his hands. He then returned to the island and, gaining a footing, soon succeeded in dislodging the prisoner. The latter was so thoroughly frozen that he had practically to be dragged to the boat. Once on the yacht he was stripped and rubbed, restatives were applied and he was soon in a rapidly improving condition.

At 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon the party set out on their return trip and arrived within a mile and a half of Richmond last night. On account of the fog, however, they could not land until about 7 o'clock this morning.

KEPT ON HUNTING.

Mr. McDonough says that after he got lost from his friends he kept on hunting, killing ducks rapidly. Before the tide was in he crossed over to the island above mentioned and after hunting awhile, started back. The water by this time had risen considerably and he could not discover the point at which he had crossed over and took the trip back in a canoe. He got stuck in the mud about 9 o'clock and for over four hours was held a prisoner. He says that his strength was rapidly leaving him when he heard the guns and by the time he was hauled out he was nearly exhausted. The water was within four inches of his head and a few moments more would have settled his fate.

When he was carried to the boat, he was purple all over and his chattering teeth could be heard some distance off. This morning Mr. McDonough was feeling about as lively and will be his old self in a few days.

The hunt, notwithstanding the rather unexpected occurrence, was an entire success, thirty-one ducks having been killed.
